Work
Test

FOXTERRIER WORK TEST

The work tests will be run as informal tests without record in the dog's pedigree.

They will consist of three individual parts:

- I. bolting
- II. work on a blood trail
- III. wild boar work

Part I. - Bolting

Bolting will be carried out according to the rules of the Czech bolting test without record in the dog's pedigree. The training will take place in the morning; the evaluated official test will be run in the afternoon.

The following disciplines will be tested during the bolting test:

- a) Readiness to work
- b) Loudness
- c) Persistence
- d) Speed

Performance evaluation

Each discipline is evaluated by points on the scale 4 – 0. The overall dog's work is rated either PASSED or FAILED according to the total points obtained.

Points for each discipline:

ad a) Readiness to work describes the dog's efforts to keep constant contact with the fox in all parts of the earth.

4 points are given to dog keeping constant close contact in all parts of the earth without interrupting the work or abandoning its position.

3 points are given to dog if it shortly interrupts the contact or abandons its position in the earth.

2 points are given to dog for interrupting the work for time longer than half of the working time in the given part of the earth.

1 point will be given to dog keeping weaker contact and showing signs of timidity.

0 points will get dog showing no interest in work.

ad b) 4 points will be given to dog persistently barking at the barrier.

3 points will get dog barking with short interruptions.

2 points will get dog barking at the place of work for at least half of the test time.

1 point will be given dog barking occasionally or barking elsewhere than at the barrier.

0 points will obtain dog who fails to show any loudness.

ad c) 4 points will obtain dog which doesn't leave the earth; for each earth leaving, one point is deducted.

ad d) 4 points will get dog reaching the end of the den up to 30 seconds.

3 points will get dog reaching the end of the den up to 60 seconds.

2 points will get dog reaching the end of the den up to 90 seconds.

1 point will get dog reaching the end of the den up to 120 seconds.

0 points will obtain dog reaching the end of the den in more than 120 seconds.

Part II. - Work on a blood trail

The time limit is 60 minutes. The blood trail is 500 to 600 footsteps long with two direction changes.

For setting up one trail, 0.3 liter of blood is used (usually pork or game blood; veterinary provisions forbid the use of beef blood). Approximately in the half of the trail, a blood-marked base (a place where the hurt game had briefly relaxed) is placed. The base is marked by small branches and higher amount of dripped blood. Before the work starts, the judge lets the dog leaders draw lots for the number of the blood trail. The blood trail is aged from minimum 1 to maximum 4 hours.

a) Work on a leash or off-leash

The judge will show the leader of the dog the beginning of the trail. The leader is then supposed to put the dog on the trail. Dogs must (on their own or after an instruction from their leader) mark the blood and follow the blood trail. Dog follows the trail on at least 5-meters-long fully unwound leash or off-leash in a close contact with its leader. If the dog works on a leash, the leader holds the end of the leash and can let go or shorten the leash only when overcoming an obstacle, in dense undergrowth etc.

Ideally, dog working on the blood trail should be the whole time of work heavily pushing against the tracking harness and follow the trail with certitude through the base to the end where the dead game is lying. If the leader of the dog be looking back to find out the direction of the blood trail from the marks, the judge reprimands him /her; each reprehension means a deduction of a point.

Dog should progress freely, calmly, and keep to the blood trail; it must not follow trails of wild game crossing the artificial blood trail. Dog is allowed to show its leader a trail of unhurt game only up to 20 steps and then it has to return to the blood trail. If the dog doesn't return, judges have to stop the leader, show him/her the blood trail and let the dog keep on working on it. When the dog leaves the blood trail, the leader can stop it, inform the judges about the situation, find the blood trail on his/her own, and put the dog on the blood trail again. If the dog gets more than 20 steps from the blood trail and its leader fails to recognize it, the judges must stop him/her, show him/her the blood or the direction of the blood trail and let the dog work again. Each correction by the judges means deduction of a point. Should the dog leave the trail four times or should it fail to reach the end of it within an hour, it gets 0 points. Off-leash work is evaluated by up to 2 points.

b/ Dog can work also as “barker” or “announcer” – “loud announcer”

Before putting the dog on the blood trail, the leader must announce to the judge in which mode the dog will work. In case the dog is “announcer” (after finding the game it returns to the leader and announces the finding), the leader informs the judge how the dog will announce the found game.

The judge shows the leader the beginning of the trail. Dog must (on its own or after the instruction of the leader) follow the trail as far as the base (marked approximately in the half of the trail). Upon an instruction of the judge, the leader lets the dog off-leash at the base and the dog keeps working the trail. The leader and the judge wait by the base till the dog barks by the game or comes to announce finding of the game to its leader. The dog must do so within 15 minutes from being let off-leash. If the dog follows the trail barking, the leader and the judge slowly follow it. The judge records the fact into the dog’s pedigree (“loud announcer”). If the dog fails as “announcer”, its leader can ask the judge to let the dog work the same trail on leash. However, one point is deducted from the final evaluation. If the dog works as “announcer” or “barker”, the evaluation can be up to 5 points higher. Leaders are forbidden to look for signs marking the direction of the trail or turn around on the trail. If the judges decide the leader is leading its dog in this manner, they announce it to him/her; after third reprehension the judges have to stop the work on blood trail.

Part III: Wild boar work

-The time limit is 5 minutes. The discipline is tested with a wild boar safely closed in a fence to prevent either the dog or the game getting hurt. Upon the instruction from the judge, the dog is unleashed 30 meters down the wind, put towards the fence and instructed to search. The dog should catch the scent of the game within 2 minutes and reach the fence. After finding the enclosure, the dog should demonstrate readiness to work with signs of hard pressing and constant barking. In case the hard pressing might lead to harm for the dog, the judge must finish the test before the time limit. 4 points will get dog barking at the wild boar constantly for 5 minutes, attacking the fence and striving for a close contact with the boar.

3 points obtains dog attacking the fence hard yet with no loud barking with the risk of harm for the dog, or dog with short, interrupted loud barking striving to attack the boar.

2 points are given to dog barking at the boar for time shorter than 5 minutes, leaving the vicinity of the enclosure to search its leader, and after encouragement returns to the fence.

1 point is given to dog barking at the boar in the fence shortly, but repeatedly returning to its leader who must repeatedly encourage the dog to get back to the boar.

0 points get dog afraid of the boar, failing to announce it, refusing to get close to the fence and showing little interest in work.

Each leaving of the place of work means deduction of one point. By the place of work is meant the space within 1.5/2.5 meters from the enclosure.

In the case of the equity of the points the following items decide:

- 1) the young dog has the priority before the older one
- 2) the male dog has the priority before the female dog
- 3) in the absolute winner competition: the dog who received the better mark in the section II (the work on the blood trail) has the priority. In the case of the same mark the judge select the best work

General provisions:

Leader of the dog can enroll his/her dog for any of the three parts of the test. Each part will be evaluated separately. An extra evaluation will be carried out for dogs who took part in all three disciplines with the highest score. The absolute winner will be chosen out of these dogs.
